This 36-acre estate truly offers you the best of both worlds providing a fusion of modern luxuries and accessibility with a large private estate set into the heart of some of the world's most lush rainforest. This newly built 5500 sq. foot home sits like a treehouse above the forest canopy on 36 acres of private estate land. The estate is set just above the quaint town of Villanueva, just a 20-minute drive from the world-famous Manuel Antonio national park and all the amenities and services of the town of Quepos. The farm offers elevations that start at 500 feet above sea level and go up to 1000 feet which provides an amazing temperate climate in which you can live in total comfort year-round. The house itself is all new construction built to exacting standards and includes almond wood floors, stainless steel appliances, imported slate floors and decks, satellite television, and even 3G internet services. In addition to the main home which is a stunning centerpiece, there is a caretakers residence at the entrance to the farm with an amazing on-site farm manager who has been working on the property for a decade as
